Marcia knew what was in their thoughts. They wanted her to teach a year in her home town while Jim Wilkins was building up a law practice, and then the two families would be united by a wedding.

Jim came to call within half an hour after he got home. More or less tact-fully, the Myles family left the two young folks on the front plazzs.

"They'll probably settle it all now, father," whispered Mrs. Myles to her husband.

But an eavesdropper would have surmised that the "settling" was a long way off.

Marcia could hardly refrain a smile. "The poor boy thinks I'm terribly clever and high-brow," she thought. But she listened intently to his next remark.

A SATISFACTORY SETTLEMENT

"Better not give it to him—might cause appendicitis," laughed a masculine voice from across the fence. "Besides, I'd rather have it if you have a bite to spare." With a quick vault Jim came over the fence.

He took the chicken from Marcia and held it up to his cheek. "Isn't 'im cunnin' 'ittle fing," he teased.

"Silly," ahe retorted, "put the chick back and I'll get you a cookie. I made 'em and they're good, if I do say so."

She came back with a substantial helping.

"Say, Marcia," suggested Jim, "why couldn't we go fishing this afternoon? It's a glorious day. I'll bring the worms and you might bring some cookies."
"And we'll go down to Long Pond," chimed in Marcia joyously.
